

Social and Personal

ANNOUNCEMENTS were received today from Mr. and Mrs. J. Bertram Lippincott of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sarah Lippincott, and Nicholas Biddle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Biddle, of this city, which took place last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lippincott, 1712 Spruce street, at 7 o'clock. Great interest in the ceremony was evoked. The absolute simplicity and entire lack of form was so different from the usual fashionable weddings.

The ceremony was that prescribed by the Friends. There was no music and the guests were seated as the bridal party filed in and up the center of the room, which was divided off in a long aisle. When they reached the end the bride and bridegroom faced the guests and seated themselves, the bride on the left and the bridegroom on the right. They remained seated for more than five minutes, and then Mr. Biddle rose and, going to the bride, took her right hand and repeated the marriage form. He then returned to his seat and the bride arose and repeated the formula. After a silence of some time Professor Swayne, of Swarthmore, gave a short address on "Youth."

A table was brought into the room and placed near the young couple. On the table was a long document, to which Mr. and Mrs. Biddle affixed their names.

Isaac Clothier, who is one of the elders of the Society of Friends, then rose and read this document, and addressed them as Mr. and Mrs. Biddle, and the bridal party again filed out in silence.

The guests were requested to sign the document. The marriage certificate signed by the witnesses has become quite the vogue for the last few years, but in most cases is only a pretty custom. In the Friends' ceremony, however, the signing of the book and the bringing in of the book after the plighting of troths is an essentially component part.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey T. Sayen will entertain at dinner Tuesday night before the Bal Masque in honor of Mrs. Sayen's brother, Marshall S. Wippeny. Their guests will be Dr. and Mrs. Henry K. Dillard, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Kirkland, Miss Anna B. Gilpin, Archibald C. V. Wells and Livingston Fryer, of Buffalo.

Mrs. William W. Farr, accompanied by her granddaughter, Miss Helena S. Robinson, will leave next week for a month's stay at Palm Beach, Fla. Miss Robinson will be the guest of honor at a dinner of 14 covers to be given Monday night by her uncle and aunt, Judge William Wilkins Carr and Mrs. Carr.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Meredith Burk, of West Logan square, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Jessica Burk, and Thomas Henry Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Brown, of Wyncoote, at a luncheon given today at the Bellevue-Stratford. The guests were Mrs. Thomas E. Brown, Miss Edna Brown, Miss Myra Atkinson, Miss Elizabeth Williamson, Miss Margaret May, Miss Thelma Berger, Miss Lillian Cassaday, Miss Eleanor Busby, Miss Marie Ziegler, Miss Evelyn Booth, Miss Emma Burk, Mrs. William Lee Dixon, Jr., Miss Mildred Foster, Miss Elsa Barth, Miss Florence Randall and Miss Maud Wiggins.

Mrs. Gordon Hunter Mullin announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Catharine Hunter Gordon, and William Elliot Cathcart.

A number of persons have arranged a subscription dinner, to take place at the Anchorage preceding the Bal Masque. They will be Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. McNeely, Mr. and Mrs. W. Kemple Yarrow, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Koltz, Mrs. William R. Howell, Harry Yarrow, Harry Lawrence, Gorham Tristram, T. Deland Williams, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Hirt and Miss Elizabeth Wilbur, who will come up from Warren for the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kinder, of City avenue, entertained the members of the Guild Choir of Holy Trinity Church last night at a small musical. Those present were the Rev. and Mrs. Floyd W. Tomkins, the Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Cone, Mrs. Frank Williamson, Mrs. B. J. Roderer, Mrs. John W. Townsend, Miss Grace Allen, Miss Marie Blispham, Miss Elizabeth Elliot, Miss Elizabeth Collier, the Misses Bunn, Miss Catherine Lennig, Miss Harriet Van Baum, Miss Adelaide Flag, Miss Fay Benne-tum.

"The Paper Chase," a farce comedy in three acts, will be presented by the Dramatic Club of the Brown Preparatory School this evening in the New Century Drawing Rooms. The chaperones are Mrs. Eugene P. Dowd, Mrs. Meredith Jones, Mrs. John M. Patterson, wife of Judge Patterson, an alumnus of the school; Mrs. Charles S. Hillman, Mrs. Robert K. Vollum, Mrs. Joseph Bradley Large, Mrs. Melbourn S. Miller, Mrs. Anna C. Rutherford, Mrs. Albert H. Smith and Mrs. David Parks Sims.

An innovation this year will be the dance to be held after the play. The alumni of the school are taking an active interest in this year's production, and a large attendance is assured. The University of Pennsylvania section of the Alumni Association has engaged a large block of seats and will attend in a body. Letters have also been received from the alumni members of New York, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and many of the smaller surrounding cities, signifying their intention of being present.

According to the custom of previous years the play will be repeated at the Central Branch T. M. C. A. later in the month, after which arrangements are under consideration for several productions in different sections of the city for the benefit of the Emergency Aid Committee.

Among the students who will take part in the play are Edward L. Helger, Frank Till, Raymond Matthews, Louis Thomas Devlin, Milton Devereux Schweigert, John Ruder Miller, Edith Braucht and Kathleen E. Sweet.

The members of the club include Miss Mary McKeegan, Miss Margaret Shults, Miss Mildred Pepperman, Miss Ethel Cur, Harold Robinson, Edward Hoover, George McHugh, Stephen Langton, of Baltimore; Jack Beck, James Carr, of Bala, and Milton Mowbray, of Wynnefeld.

OVERBROOK-Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Grant White, of Overbrook Heights, have issued invitations for a valentine party, to be given at their home on Saturday night, in honor of their daughter, Miss Mildred Walker White, who will come from her school at Hackettstown, N. J., tomorrow afternoon. The decorations will consist of arrow-pierced hearts, festooned from the chandelier to the corners of the room, and a profusion of crimson flowers. Miss White will bring with her two of her school friends, Miss Adele Porter and Miss Frances Lineburner, who will spend the week-end with her.

WEST PHILADELPHIA Mrs. Lawrence Crist Hickman will entertain her "509" club this afternoon at her home, 312 North 40th street.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Haines Brown, who were planning a large dinner-dance to celebrate the 10th anniversary of their wedding, have changed their plans, and will instead give a card party on Monday evening, at which 40 guests will be present. The affair will be given at their home, 5109 Chester avenue, and a beautiful scheme of decoration is being planned. The colors will be pink and white, with a background of greenery. Carnations and roses will be used in abundance. Mrs. Brown will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Robert Fairman and Mrs. Walter Jerolomano. At 11 o'clock an informal supper will be served, after which dancing will take place. Ten tables will be used for the game, which will be "500."

Miss Katie May Hein, of Louisville, Ky., is visiting Miss Margaret Dempsey, of 431 Baltimore avenue.

SIXTY-FIVE SHORT STORIES

EDITOR MEN and successful authors always advise young hopefuls to write love stories. "Play up the love stuff" they reiterate with a wise air. And reading the magazines casually, you get a notion in the back of your head that love stories swing about 80 per cent. of the space. But, like many other popular impressions, this is incorrect. Of 65 fiction stories in 11 current magazines only 11 are regular orthodox love stories—17 per cent. The next most astonishing fact is that there are just as many stories about married people as there are about lovers—another 17 per cent. Of course, in an ideal state, a story with a man and his wife for hero and heroine might be a love story, too, but in fiction, as in life, this is rarely the case. So the 11 married people stories are chiefly about alienations and flirtations and reconciliations, and various relations.

The next most popular class of story is the boy story, and there are eight of these, ranging from 17-year-old William Sylvester Baxter, hitherto invulnerable and scornful, writing a love poem to a beautiful unknown whom he has just passed on the village street (1) to 7-year-old Lester, whose artist parents neglected him, and who advertises in the paper for a home (2). Surprisingly enough, there are only three war stories. It seems to take time for the war atmosphere to permeate the divine afflatus.

The serial stories are in a class by themselves, because they require a distinct class of readers, temperaments compounded of just the right degree of courage, impetuosity, patience, perseverance and spare time. There are 12 in the 11 magazines.

The most prolific magazine writer at the moment is easily Booth Tarkington. He is writing more of his famous Penrod stories in the Cosmopolitan, and a series about an older boy, aged 17, in the Metropolitan. He also has a grown-up serial in Harper's. The next busiest man is John Galsworthy, with a new serial in Scribner's, a charming little desert sketch, also in Scribner's, and a "Love Letter to France" in the Atlantic Monthly.

- To sum up the 65 stories, their main subjects may be classified as follows:
11 Love.
11 Married people.
8 Boys.
5 Detective and mystery.
4 Adventure.
4 Psychological analyses.
3 War.
7 Miscellaneous.
12 Serial.

The news item of the month in magazine fiction circles is easily the marriage of Emma McChesney, which occurs in the Cosmopolitan (3). For several years readers of Edna Ferber stories have followed the fortunes of this clever young business woman, who, by a combination of hard work and breezy charm, was flooding the Middle West with Featherblom petticoats. The "old man" of the firm died, and his son, an attractive but pampered young chap, did not have the call-bro to step into his father's place, so that Emma McChesney was virtually "boss" of the T. A. Buck Featherblom Petticoat Company, when she went to South America for a four months' tour introducing Featherblooms. On her return she found to her surprise that young T. A. Buck had somehow risen to the responsibilities which came to him in her absence, and it was with a pang of jealousy at first that she deferred to him—but let Edna Ferber tell about it. Emma and Buck are sitting in front of the fire in her apartment, having dined together there; Emma speaks:

"T. A., I—I want to tell you that I know I've been acting the cat ever since I got home from South America, and found that you had taken charge. You see, you had spotted me. The thing that has happened to me is the thing that always happens to those who assume to be dictators. I just want you to know now that I'm glad and proud and happy because you have come into your own."
Buck sat silent for a moment. Then:
"I had to do it Emma." She looked up.
"You have a wonderful brain," said Buck then, and the two utterances seemed connected in his mind. "The example you set accomplished this; it wasn't I."
Compliments seemed to bring no great satisfaction to the woman to whom he addressed:

them, however. She thanked him dryly, as women do when their brain is dragged into an intimate conversation. "But," said Buck, and suddenly stood up. "It isn't for your mind that I love you this minute, I love you for your eyes, Emma, and for your mouth—you have the tenderest, most womanly sweet mouth in the world—and for your hair, and the way your chin curves, I love you for your throat line, and for the way you walk and talk and sit, and for the way you look at me, and for the way you don't look at me."

He reached down and gathered Emma McChesney, the alert, the aggressive, the capable, into his arms, quite as men gather the clingiest kind of woman. "And now suppose you tell me just why and how you love me."

And Emma McChesney told him. There is plenty of quaint philosophy in a Homeburg story by George Fitch in the American Magazine (4). It is a monologue by one of Homeburg's old inhabitants, who is visiting in New York city: "That's where you have all the luck, Jim—you big city folks. You keep your interesting people at home; there's nowhere bigger for them to go. No matter how successful or famous they are, they have to stick around and mingle, unless they get Europa of the intellect. When you grow up with a chum in New York and he discovers a talent that has been kicking around in his garret ever since he was born, you don't lose him. He just stays home and grows up to fit the town. But when I want to see my old Homeburg playmates that have succeeded, I have to go to New York, or Chicago, or San Francisco, or some big place where old Opportunity keeps a wrecking crew busy all the time beating in doors. Opportunity doesn't come into a small town and knock. He stands outside and beckons."

There is a charming vision of maiden tenderness and shyness in a fragment from a young girl's diary, when love first came to her. It is from Galsworthy's serial, "The Freeland's," in Scribner's (5):

"The next day was the thunderstorm. I never saw lightning so near—and didn't care a bit. If he were struck, I knew I should be; that made it all right. When you love you don't care if only the something must happen to you both. When it was over, and we came out from behind the stacks and walked home through the fields, all the beasts looked at us as if we were new and had never been seen before; and the air was ever so sweet, and that low red line of cloud, low down in the purple, and the elm trees so heavy and almost black. He put his arm around me, and I let him."

EVENING SONG

Go, Day, thou restless rover; Forever vain thy quest; To match my love's eyes, Emma, and there's nothing to discover Till he returns—my love!

And Night, thy stary skies, Mysterious and splendid, With dread and beauty blended, Alright me sore, who am not wise, Unless I dream of his dear eyes.

Soothe, Time, thy changing chime; When he is far—my heart!—How tedious thou art! When he is near, there is no rime To compass thy glad fleetness, Time! —K. R. Cate, in Munsey's.
